INK

The challenge to melt this frozen heart
I tried to show the best of my soul
But you tear it apart
You in my chest left a hole.
I've been caught by the thoughts since then
I felt whole with them
I could've asked you to leave
But your smoke made me believe.
Being blinded never felt so good
I never found joy in what is misunderstood
Promised not to fall again
But I needed someone to remove this stain.
I'm sorry if It's cold here
But I think it's warmer since you're near Doubt has taken over
Girl, I need you to stay closer.
I'd like to be a boozier
And drown what I did with the drink
But I'd rather remember
What is written in the ink.
Recovering my credibility

Capitalizing this moments of lucidity

No time to think

Just to embody a heart in ink.
